QUOTE SHEET: What is being said about Project Gigaton

BENTONVILLE, Ark., April 19, 2017 – Today, during Walmart’s annual Milestone Summit, the company launched a sustainability platform inviting suppliers to join Walmart in committing to reduce greenhouse gas emissions resulting from their operations and supply chains. Here are a selection of quotes from industry associations, NGOs and suppliers on the Project Gigaton initiative:

David Darr, President, Farm Services at Dairy Farmers of America

“We are excited to work with Walmart toward their sustainability goals, and aligned with their vision. Our farmer members have a strong track record of progress and stewardship and are excited to continue this journey as technology evolves in this area.”

Nina Goodrich, Director, The Sustainable Packaging Coalition (How2Recycle)

“Walmart’s leadership in embracing consistent, accurate and transparent recycling claims like How2Recycle has positively influenced many global brand owners to join the program.”

Euan Murray, Chief Executive Officer, The Sustainability Consortium

“Climate change is one of the gravest threats we face. It also presents unlimited opportunities for companies that choose to lead. By taking a science-based approach to set such an audacious goal, Walmart cements its place as a leader with Project Gigaton. The Sustainability Consortium is proud to support Walmart in this critical initiative and we look forward to helping them deliver.”

Kees Kruythoff, President, Unilever North America

“We congratulate Walmart on using the power of collective action to tackle carbon reduction and climate change. We will continue to support Walmart’s efforts in reducing one gigaton of carbon through initiatives like our Sustainable Agriculture commitment.”
